

Host Virtual Events and Connect With Your Community During Children's Book Week!

November 8 - 14, 2021

CHILDREN'S BOOKWEEK

Celebrate with us November 8-14, 2021 by hosting virtual events and/or acting as a spokesperson for your community to encourage parents and kids at home to celebrate.

Don't forget to use #BookWeekSuperpower online so we can see all the amazing things you are doing during the week.

Virtual Event Ideas

- How about a live storytime that people can tune into on social media or through a webcast? See publisher's updated Fair Usage Policies for reading their books online.
- Film a guided craft video that parents and kids can follow along with at home.
- Host an online book club using the video conferencing platform of your choice.
- Create a scavenger hunt using your website or the website of your local bookstore or library.
- Host an online writing workshop with kids.
- Host an online poster coloring contest.
- Connect with a local author or illustrator and ask them to do a live storytime or drawing demonstration through one of your social media platforms.

Engage with your community online

- Send out a Children's Book Week special edition newsletter to your mailing list and share all of the online resources that parents can print and use at home.
- Encourage parents to use these amazing publisher resources and videos with their kids.
- Start an online Reading Challenge. You can use the Book Week reading challenge list on the back of the poster! Encourage your community to check off as many boxes as they can during the week and share a picture of their list online and tag you. Don't forget to share yours too.
- Ask your social media community to share how they are celebrating at home. They can use #BookWeekSuperpower and tag your location to share their at-home celebration ideas and activities. And you can share some of your favorites online and in your next newsletter.
- How about a community "Round Robin" story? Start a story on your facebook page and ask parents/kids to continue the story in the comments. You can even read the finished story out loud online.
- Share these at-home celebration ideas with your community.
